A Man With Nine Wives

"You have nine wiver, you have. Bine Board was a gentleman to you," exclaimed Mrs Julia Starpe, a typical looking, beefeating English woman, who stood in Jactice Divver's Court in New York on Saturday morning.

This bli of personal reflection was cast upon James Edwards, a middle-aged man whom she had employed for 6 months. The vehement subject of Queen Victoria charged Edwards with stealing $1 000 worth of money and jowe's from her. She wanted him punished. Mrs. Sharpe stated her own care, her attorney not being able to get a word in edgewise.

'I sm an English woman, your Honor," she ritted, "and I want to try and get a little English justice in this blasted country, if it is possible."

His Honor informed the jewel bedecked daughter of Britain that she should have carticade of justice as good as the English brand, if she would allow him to say a word.

The irate woman declared that America was a nation of "scamps, scoundrels and scalawage."
The people here," she shrieked, "are a (e) of pie-

"The pecple here," she shricked, "are a (c) of pic-cating pigs"
she had lived in England, she had lived in Era-zi, and this was the worst yet. She hadn't been in New York two days before a French woman buncoed her out of $17.
She then told how Edwards had robbediher and discharged six other men on the ground that they had done the stealing.

had done the stealing.

Edwards heard this remark and returned audi-Edwards heard this remark and returned audibly that Mrs. Sharpe was resred in Pett'coat Lanc and that she had about as much right to the title of lady as the cart had to the proverbial fifth wheel. He could a tale unfold about her if he would, but he wouldn't at this stage of the game. Then it was that she declared that Edward; had nine wives. This greatly disgusted progeny of England after being informed that Edward; would have to appear for trial, stalked out of the court room, muttering that American jestice was a room, muttering that American jostice was a fraud and a delusion. She had evidently expected to get back her alleged stolen jewels.

A Famous Eulogy.

Of all the eulogies in literature there is none more beautiful than the following upon Gen. Robert E Lee. It fell from the silver tongue of that elequent Georgian Senator Berjamia H. Hill, and is said to have been extempore.

"When the future historian comes to survey the character of Lee, be will find it rising the a huge mountain above the unduto the his eyes high toward heaven to catch to un mit. He possessed every virtue of the other great commanders without their vices Hs was a fee without bate, a friend withous treachery, a soldier without cruelty, and a victim without murmuring. He was a public officer without vices, a private reproach, a christian without hypocrisy, and a man without guilt. He was Caesar without his ambition, Frederick without his tyranny, Napoleon without his selfishness, and Weshington without his reward. He was as obedient to authority as a servant and royal in authority as a true king. He was as gentle as a woman in life, pure and modest as a virgio in thought, watching as a Roman vestal in duty, submissive to law as Sacrates, and grand in battle as Achilles,

HER EKULL AN INCH THICK .-- One of the most extraordinary cases that has come before the morgue officials in years developed in St. Louis Friday night. Nancy Sharp, s colored woman thirt, two years old died

The body was moved to the morgue, and shortly afterward it transpired that the women's li'e was insured for $500. Almost at the same moment a theory of foul play became current, and Dr. William N. Brennan was sent for to make an official autopsy.

As a result of this the cause of the woman's death was given as congestion of the mem-brane of the brain, resulting from the ex-traordinary thickness of the skull. At the forehead the skull was about one inch thick and it gradually increased until at the back of the head it artsined a thickness of nearly one and a-half inches,

HEE CHILDREN OBJECTED -Mrs. Col. Miller, wealthy and dashing young widow of thirty, and Charles Crumby, her bired man, aged eighteen, Charles Crumby, her hired man, aged eighteen, were married Saturday night at Lothair, Ga. When the justice of the peace arrived to perform the ceremony the children of the widow became obstreperous and threatened to kill him if he dared to perform the ceremony.

"Ma, you shall not marry that man," cried the oldest daughter. "If you do, you shan't remain here a minute." During the shrieks of the smaller and the protestations of the larger children, the couple were made man and wife. They immediately left for parts unknown.

Eumor says that husband No. 1 made a will that in the event of his wife marrying again the bulk of the property should revert to the children at once.
